Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra to Hold Auditions for Six Vacant Positions

The orchestra rebounds from a tumultuous 2020 into a growth-oriented 2021

FORT WORTH, TEXAS (March 3, 2021) — During a year that was detrimental to many live performing arts organizations, the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra (FWSO) implemented a series of safety innovations to allow the organization to perform regularly for live audiences of up to 750 patrons per performance. Based on these public performances, the orchestra has secured generous funding from its donors, which has allowed the organization to pay its musicians and staff in full since the start of the pandemic. The FWSO also recently named the distinguished conductor Robert Spano as Music Director Designate. Building on this success, the FWSO is proud to announce it is holding auditions for six tenure-track positions, including Principal Viola, Principal Horn, Principal Bassoon, Associate Principal Cello, Section Oboe/English Horn, and Section First Violin

“The past year has been challenging for us and many other orchestras worldwide. I am proud that the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra has remained financially stable and found a way to keep playing to audiences during these troubling times,” said Dr. Keith Cerny, Ph.D., President and CEO of the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra. “Following the hardships of 2020, I am delighted to announce that we are beginning the audition process to fill six tenure-track positions. This is a positive and much-needed step towards the future of the FWSO. And thanks to the experience and leadership of our newly announced Music Director, Robert Spano, the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra is well poised for years of artistic innovation, and exceptional live performances.”
